

STANFORD UNIVERSITY MEDICAL CENTER project:renewal

Project Overview

Stanford University Medical Center has transformed countless lives in our community, offering the highest quality medical services available anywhere right in our own backyard.

In order for the Medical Center to continue to be here when our patients need us most, we must rebuild and modernize facilities that are the foundation of our community's healthcare services. The primary community benefit of the Renewal Project is providing safe, modern hospitals with adequate capacity for patient care.

The Stanford University Medical Center Renewal Project will:

- Rebuild Stanford Hospital & Clinics and the Emergency Department (which serves both Hospitals) to meet seismic-safety requirements and capacity needs
- Modernize and expand Lucile Packard Children's Hospital to meet capacity needs
- Replace outdated School of Medicine facilities to meet new seismic-safety standards and accommodate modern technology
- Renovate Hoover Pavilion, the original Palo Alto Hospital, to accommodate outpatient care
